

at a lower level; or similar drains may be laid just outside of the building.

It is plain that greater attention should be paid to drainage in towns near our sea coast than in the hilly regions, as decomposition is generally greater, due to increased moisture and temperature, not forgetting however that its neglect anywhere must cause pernicious effects.